Ideas for a better cross-cultural power point presentation:

1. Decide on 3-5 key concepts.
    a. 3 is good, 5 is maximum to use for a good presentation that will be remembered. (KISS: Keep It Simple Saints)
    b. Think: is it Kingdom or is it Western?
        i. If we say "home group" to people that don't have homes to accommodate meetings for safety or other reasons, isn't the Vineyard value of "small group" lost?
        ii. If we are using computer jargin or slogans/sayings from movies as illustrations, do we effectively communicate with people who have limited if any access to computers or western movies?

2. Use several ways to communicate each concept:

An example that is trans-cultural Especially good examples in any culture are things from nature:
- a dog is a dog (unless they are a menu choice where you're speaking)
- a tree grows from a seed and blows in the wind

3. Repeat this process for each concept
4. Create a storyboard of your presentation with each concept and the ways you'll communicate each concept
5. Go over the storyboard sheets with your translator before the presentation so he or she has the big picture and can more effectively communicate the ideas
